Have a conversation with your child's healthcare professional (HCP).

You can help protect your child against invasive pneumococcal disease (IPD). Making the decision to vaccinate your child against invasive pneumococcal disease is an important one. Have a conversation with your child's healthcare professional about vaccinating your child. Knowing what questions to ask can help you make the most of your visit.

The following questions can help you get a conversation started. The spaces below each question will give you an opportunity to take notes and to write down any questions of your own.

Questions for your child's healthcare professional:

I've heard about invasive pneumococcal disease. Is my child at risk?

I've heard about a pneumococcal vaccine. What types of diseases does it help protect against?

Isn't my child already vaccinated against invasive pneumococcal disease?

Where does this vaccine fit into my child's routine vaccination schedule?

How many doses of this vaccine should my child receive and why?

Questions of your own:

Notes:

Brought to you by Pfizer

PP-PNP-USA-0350-02 © 2016 Pfizer Inc. All rights reserved. July 2016